

Dr. Ashley (Anica) Lackovich is a passionate advocate for children's education. As a global authority on child protection, Ashley supported children and adolescents in conflicts and humanitarian crises in places such as Ethiopia, the DR Congo, and throughout the Middle East. During her work with the United Nations Refugee Agency (UNHCR), she set guidelines on safeguarding children during the Syrian civil war. Currently working in nonprofit development, she continues to consult globally through Enhancing Girlhood LLC and serves as president of Enhance Worldwide, a nonprofit she co-founded to support children in Ethiopia.

Ashley is an author for Ancient Faith and a respected writer and speaker, sharing her insights on Orthodox Christianity's juxtaposition with aiding vulnerable children. Originally from St. Elijah Serbian Orthodox Church in Aliquippa, Pennsylvania, Ashley has a deep appreciation for the global Orthodox community. Throughout her travels, she has embraced churches of various jurisdictions, including churches under the Patriarch of Jerusalem in the Middle East, the Russian Church Abroad in Switzerland, and the Serbian Church in both Berlin and Paris, offering her service and active engagement within their communities. She currently attends St. George Serbian Orthodox Church in Cincinnati, Ohio.
