

Reverend Presbyter Srebrenko Vidakovich is the parish priest at Charlotte, North Carolina and the Co-chairman for the Diocesan Educational Commission.

Parallel to pursuing his Theological education, after he graduated on St. Cyril and Methodius Serbian Orthodox Seminary in Nis, on his second year of Faculty of Theology in Belgrade in 2005, he began his journey in education by working as a catechist in an elementary school, spanning from grades K1 to K8. This dual commitment allowed him to gain extensive experience in children's education over the span of 16 and a half years, investing countless hours in different educational seminars and workshops, while continuing to deepen his official Theological education, attending Religion Masters program on University of Belgrade, parallel with continuous computer science personal improvement. From 2016 to 2021, he held the position of the first assistant to the elementary school director, actively contributing to the management and organization of school programs and other educational activities. Love and commitment to the field of children's education inspired him to offer more, so he became involved in a variety of different volunteer organizations such as the „Red Cross of Serbia“, „Red Cross national team for disaster management“, „Mala Matura veliko srce - for Kosovo and Metohija school students“, and many other similar organizations that took place during his teaching career.

In his free time, he enjoys writing and reading - computer science, music, and avionics are his favorite hobbies.

His motto is: "Don't ask how much you will receive in return, but how much you can give, not expecting anything in return."
